

To Whom It May Concern:

My daughter Grace Tyler began her educational career at 6 months old, with Little People's Place, Inc.

Little People's Place, Inc, gave my daughter an excellent foundation. At 6 months old Grace learned to develop her social skills such as eating, holding a fork, recognizing colors, building blocks and using the potty, interacting with other children and least not to say learning how to walk. The teachers at LPP are patient and dedicated to the educational and social awareness of the children. Upon graduation of Little People's Place, Inc., Grace knew how to read, write, count to 20 in Spanish and 200 in English. Grace was well disciplined and more than ready to take on new endeavors. I am forever grateful for the foundation that Grace received from Little People's Place, Inc.. Her foundation with LPP, allowed Grace to further her education in an Ivy League elementary school, The School at Columbia University.

I wish Little People's Place, Inc. much success. I know that, Theresa McNeil, Executive Director, and staff have great powers and the will to create an exceptional environment and great hope for the little people of the future.

Sincerely,

Robin Cooper
